BERNHARD AND SARAH (ROSALIA) HOFBAUER

Bernhard Hofbauer, a native of Pressburg, settled in nearby Vienna as a young man. He became a beloved and universally respected person in all circles of the Austrian capital until his death in 1929, more than half a century later, at the age of 83.

His exemplary family life and the ethical conduct of his successful business enterprise, employing over 150 persons, were based on the principles of orthodox Judaism, the main pillar of which was strict observance of the Sabbath.

Ably sided by his wife Sarah in the traditional religious upbringing of his children, he was privileged to see all his sons and daughters marry members of pious and distinguished families. Their descendants now live in various countries of Europe, America, Australia and Israel, continuing in the footsteps of Bernhard and Sarah Hofbauer.

Although interested and active in many charities and in the affairs of the Jewish community of Vienna, the main interests of Bernhard and Sarah Hofbauer, were devoted to the "Einheit" an organization providing free meals to the poor and needy. This organization was greatly responsible for aiding the countless refugees arriving in Vienna during and after the First World War, from their homes in Eastern Europe, devastated by the war.

It is descriptive of Bernhard Hofbauer's modesty, that he prohibited in his will, any inscription of words of praise on his tombstone, with the exception of reference to his strict Sabbath observance.
